

In this view of the great room, the entry foyer is on the left, the dining area is on the right, and the living area is behind you. The three-legged farm room *looks like table, topped with a huge clay pot that Hoefer had glazed in white, sets the scale and invites you to run a hand across it as you walk in. With walls and ceiling painted Benjamin Moore's Winter White (used throughout the house), the voluminous the skeleton of a whale," Hoefer says. The Cassiopeia chandelier from Ironware International, over the dining table, has a celestial scale. Ajax side chairs by Oly are pulled up to the Hollandaise table by Astier de Villatte, who also makes the armoire. These new pieces have a vintage air that blends right in with an 18thcentury French bombé chest and a gilded antique barometer.

1

10830 Rio Linen Coconut Milk